Reflecting the Current Political Climate

By exploring the relationship between art, activism, and social change, Tania Bruguera creates proposals and aesthetic models for others to use and adapt. Her performances are divided into short-term actions – single events and political gestures – and long-term projects that go beyond representation to create democratic institution and platforms. In collaboration with the gallery, the artist will update these projects in order to reflect the current political climate and further build on the core concepts that permeate her work. One of the central questions of the show will be of how to present social and participatory processes in the display context of an art gallery. Additionally, the exhibition will initiate the newly commissioned project *Escuela de Arte Útil (School of Useful Art), a fully functioning school held inside YBCA's galleries. Classes will be open to the public during open gallery hours.

The Highlights of the Exhibition

Tracing the evolution and practice of Bruguera's concepts, the exhibition will begin with the presentation of Homenaje a Ana Mendieta (Tribute to Ana Mendieta, 1985–96) where the artist re-performed many of Mendieta's works in order to relocate her in the Cuban cultural and artistic imaginary. It will continue with Memoria de la Postguerra I, II, and III (Memory of the Postwar I, II, and III, 1993/1994/2003), the independent newspaper project conceived as work of art; Immigrant Movement International (2010–ongoing), an artist-initiated sociopolitical movement that has created a community center for immigrants, now updated with the launch of The Party of Migrant People's Assembly; as well as The Francis Effect (2014–ongoing), a political campaign asking Pope Francis to extend Vatican City citizenship to undocumented people throughout the world, among others.

Tania Bruguera at YBCA

The artist herself explains that the threat of the Trump presidency puts basic assumptions about the identity of this the United States at risk, making the political role of art even more urgent. "The exhibition at YBCA will offer a space where art's role as a provocation and as a witness will be exercised. This is more relevant than ever, as art allows us to say and do one under systems of repression and violence", she notes.

WIDEWALLS
